

From Love to Disgust:

Emotion, Cognition, and Society

Phil 3195—Spring 2016

TTh 9:30 – 10:45

What are the emotions? Are they irrational movements of soul, at odds with our rational best judgment? Or are they, themselves, judgments? Are our emotions and our beliefs in tension? Can an emotion be wrong? Are we responsible for the emotions we experience—would we be better off without emotion at all?

This is a class about the nature of emotion. We will explore how our emotions relate to our brains, our beliefs, and the society around us.

For more information, contact Dr. Michelle Saint at mesaint@d.umn.edu

This course can be taken for elective credit counting towards the Cognitive Science Minor or the Applied Ethics Track. Contact mesaint@d.umn.edu or rschroer@d.umn.edu for more information.

